FORMER GOVERNOR ISSUES STATEMENT CONCERNING RECENT DEVELOPMENTS

AUSTIN, Sept. 28.—(P) James E. Ferguson, husband of the governor of Texas, in a statement today challenged "anybody" who "wants to make a charge against me personally or any member of the Ferguson administraof the Ferguson administration," to do so.

Frank W. Chudej, long time business associate of Ferguson, had testified in the senate, before a committee of the whole investigating the Texas Rehabilitation and Relief Commission. about receiving from Ferguson $22,000 in currency, some of it in large denominations, at intervals, over a period of seven months. Chudej said he carried out Ferguson's instructions and deposited it in an Austin bank to the credit of certain business accounts carried by Ferguson.

He said he did not know the source of the money.

Previously, Lawrence Westbrook, director of the relief commission, testified that James E. Ferguson had presided at a number of meetings of the commission. Governor Miriam A. Ferguson is ex-officio chairman of the commission.

The 32-hour week that the Ford company put into effect this week in what was described as a plan Strike Serious to strike an average of 35 hours, as specified by the NRA code, was one of the grievances of the assembly plant workmen, al-though they also are asking a $5 daily minimum.

The Ford company, which was paying a minimum wage of 50 cents an hour when the code became effective, since has raised the minimum to $4.80 a day for production workers and spokes-men have said that a schedule was being worked out to extend the increase to non-productive workmen.

We were riding through Ontario last summer, and one of our party incited by the soldiers' monuments in almost every village, remarked, "Why is it that most monuments, and marked historic sites, are military? Has the human race done nothing noteworthy besides fighting?" We were still discussing this theme, in desolutory fashion, when we came to Ottawa, where, in front of the impressive and beautiful statue of Galahad, exclusiful sta

Nothing less than the principle propounded and off-repeated by Paul, in interpretation of the Gospel of Jesus, that "We then that are strong ought to bear the burdens of the weak"; "We are every one members one of another"; and "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." Only a nation indoctrinated through generations with the Pauline teachings could conceive of such a vast experiment as the N. R. A.; the success of which depends wholly upon the willing-ness of the people to practice the religion which they profess.

not military, but who had served the world. I capped the list with the name of Paul of Tarsus. There are more effigies of Paul, and stained-glass representations of him, and paintings (of which I love best Rembrandt's peerless Paul), and churches and schools, hearing his name, than of all the great kings and conquerors and warriors combined. All over the world one finds the name of St. childhood memories upon him does Than walk alone in the light; hearing his name, than of all the great kings and conquerors and warriors combined. All over the world one finds the name of St. Paul attached to institutions that represent the highest interests of humanity.

More significant yet, Paul's present influence is greater than that of any other world leader who has ever lived. None of the famous scientists or philosophers or writers of all time can approach Paul as a shaping force in the thinking of today.

Take two instances. During this present week many millions of Sunday school members will be conning Paul's life and utterances. Thousands of ministers, the world around, will be expounding his words in sermons. A whole library of books and periodicals will be devoting their pages to Paul during the next three months. This insignificant little Jew from Tarsus, in Asia Minor, has his shaping hand upon the thought of the Twentieth century.

Even more compelling and gramatic is Paul's part in the N. R. A. movement in the United States, which the whole world is intentity watching as a new experiment by watching as a new experiment in government. What is the basic central idea of the N. R. A. Tothing less than the principle propounded and off-repeated by Paul, in interpretation of the Gost pell of Jesus, that "We then that" the approaching year are advised to proceed with caution and to make ample allowance for complying with the new government program to be announced soon, C. C. Morris, county agent, advised Wednesday.

Mr. Morris said that he understood that the plan was virtually completed and that minor details were now being worked out and the scheme would be made public within the near future. The county agent said that it was almost certain that the plan would call for a forty per cent reduction of acreage over a period of five years and that the new program would extend over at least two years and probably longer.

He declared that the plan would be of benefit to both tenant and landlord, and while adjustments might be difficult for a time, that in the end the plan would be highly beneficial, and would enable better farming methods without so much financing, which has been a burden in the past on both landlord and tenants.

Mr. Morris said that it might or might not be compulsory for certain methods to be adopted, which would include the soil preservation activities of terracing, rotation of crops and planting of legumes. He indicated, however, that farmer would probably be required to meet certain standards before he could qualify for such additional assistance as might be offered by the government.

He advised Great Eritain.

The London government had souggested that construction of the four illomoton six-inch gun cruis-res included in the program be deferred pending further discussion of possible naval limitations. The American arbassacion at large was described in this state-ment last night by the state department:

"In reply to suggestions from the British government that the laying down of any six-inch gun cruis-results and secretary, by Norman H.
